What are the risks and what could the employee get in return?

Risk indicator

The summary risk indicator is a guide to the level of risk of this product compared to other products. It shows how likely it is that the product will lose money because of movements in the markets or because we are not able to pay the employee.

We have classified this product as class 7 out of 7, which is the highest risk class. This rates the potential losses from future performance at a very high level, and poor market conditions are very likely to impact our capacity to pay the employee.

The employee does not bear the risk of incurring additional financial commitments or obligations, including contingent liabilities in addition to the notional amount invested in the product.

This product does not include any protection from future market performance so the employee could lose some or all of the notional amount of the product.

Performance scenarios

The figures shown include all the costs of the product itself, and includes the costs of your advisor or distributor. The figures do not take into account personal tax situations, which may also affect how much the employee gets back.

What the employee will get from this product depends on future market performance. Market developments in the future are uncertain and cannot be accurately predicted.

The scenarios shown are illustrations based on results from the past and on certain assumptions. Markets could develop very differently in the future.

Recommended holding period: 10 years Example Investment: 10 000 EUR
Scenarios		If the employee exits after 1 year	If the employee exits after 5 years	If the employee exits after 10 years
Minimum	There is no minimum guaranteed return. The employee could lose some or all of his investment.

	Average return each year	260,77%	56,61%	36,24%

This table shows the money the employee could get back over the next 10 years, under different scenarios, assuming that he owes a product with a notional amount of 10.000 EUR.

The scenarios shown illustrate how the product could perform. The employee can compare them with the scenarios of other products.

What the beneficiary gets will vary depending on how long he keeps the product.

The stress scenario shows what the employee might get back in extreme market circumstances, and does not take into account the situation in which we would not be able to pay the employee.

What happens if Belfius Bank is unable to pay out?

In the case of default of the PRIIP manufacturer (as a result of a bankruptcy, for example), the employee faces the risk of not recovering the amounts to which he is entitled to and may lose the notional amount of the product.

This product cannot be considered as a deposit and is therefore not protected under the Belgian deposit protection scheme.

What are the costs?

Costs over time

The tables show the amounts that are taken from the investment of the employee to cover different types of costs. These amounts depend on how much the employee invests and how long he holds the product. The amounts shown here are illustrations based on an example investment amount and different possible investment periods.

We have assumed:

- In the first year the employee would get back the amount that he invested (0% annual return). For the other holding periods we have assumed the product performs as shown in the moderate scenario
- EUR 10.000 is invested

	If the employee exits after 1 year	If the employee exits after 5 years	If the employee exits after 10 years
Total costs	500 EUR	500 EUR	500 EUR
Annual cost impact (*)	5,00%	0,98% each year	0,49% each year

(*) This illustrates how costs reduce the employee's return each year over the holding period. For example it shows that if the employee exits at the recommended holding period his average return per year is projected to be 4,33 % before costs and 3,84 % after costs. This illustrates the cost in relation to the notional value of the priip.
